Small Business Saturday features a small business in Utah – your local chiropractors:

What's the difference between receiving chiropractic care at a large facility on a sprawling medical campus and a smaller office at a more accessible location? Everything. A small, privately-owned medical practice offers many benefits to patients that the big, corporately owned healthcare operations just cannot provide. A small chiropractic care team with excellent administrative support staff can mean more personal attention, overall higher quality of health care, and a generally better patient experience.

What Is Chiropractic Medical Care?

Chiropractic health care involves a vast array of treatments for conditions ranging from chronic minor muscle aches to severe joint or spine conditions. This form of healthcare offers an array of non-invasive treatments to relieve muscle and/or joint pain, improve posture, and promote healing of a wide range of adverse health conditions.

At large facilities and smaller offices alike, spine-related conditions are an area of strong focus in chiropractic care. Realigning vertebrae and joints, spinal decompression, and other non-surgical approaches used to relieve symptoms are specialties of chiropractic medicine.

Who Can Chiropractic Care Help?

Chiropractic care includes treatments for virtually all areas of the body. The many benefits of chiropractic treatment include relief from the symptoms listed below. These are some of the many medical conditions that may be successfully treated by your family chiropractor:

Neck or shoulder pain	Tennis elbow	Joint or muscle pain
Back pain	Fibromyalgia	Inflammation
Hip, leg, and foot pain	Headaches and migraines	Tingling
Herniated discs	Asthma	Nausea
Tendonitis	Increase nerve function	Cramping
Sciatica	Limited range of motion	Exhaustion
Carpal tunnel syndrome		Shortness of breath
Neuralgia		Dizziness
		Other symptoms

What Kinds of Treatment Do Chiropractors Provide?

A chiropractic diagnostic process may involve a physical examination, X-rays, and, in some cases, a CT scan, MRI, or other exploratory aids. Health information from your primary care doctor may also be requested with your permission. We can verify what your healthcare coverage allows.

Chiropractors utilize a range of clinical equipment designed to make gentle adjustments to the body, for example, for relief of pressure on spinal discs, realignment of joints to improve nerve function and re-establishing the optimum flow of blood to relieve pain in joints or muscles.

A chiropractor also uses integrative medical treatments designed to enhance healing from procedures performed by other medical professionals. Your local family chiropractor in Troy, MI, provides the world's best traditional and nontraditional pain relief and other treatments at Advanced Health Chiropractic in Troy MI.

From spinal adjustments to acupuncture and massage therapy, chiropractic care combines the best of the world's diverse approaches to the rejuvenation of muscles and relief of joint pressure.

For Best Patient Care – See Your Local Chiropractor

Visiting your local independent chiropractic medical office typically provides patients with more personal attention in a more private and exclusive treatment environment. Further, depending on a smaller chiropractic care team means you're contributing to your own community's small business economy, which circulates income and tax funds into your area.
