How Does Spinal Decompression Work?

---

Spinal decompression is a non-invasive treatment that can significantly reduce back pain and enhance spinal health. But how does a spinal decompression process work? Let's delve into the steps involved in this effective treatment.

Phase 1: Decompression

In the initial decompression phase, a specialized spinal decompression table is used to apply a gentle, controlled force to your spine. This force, applied by a spinal decompression chiropractor, slowly and carefully stretches your spine.

The stretching effect creates a vacuum within the spinal discs, which are the gel-like cushions between your vertebral bones. This vacuum effect can pull herniated or bulging disc material back into the disc, reducing pressure on the nerves and other structures in your spine.

The reduced pressure not only alleviates pain but also improves the flow of oxygen, water, and nutrient-rich fluids into the disc, kickstarting the body's natural healing mechanisms.

Phase 2: Stabilization

After the decompression phase, the spine slowly returns to its natural position. The relief of pressure allows an influx of healing nutrients and other substances back into the disc, promoting further healing and recovery.

Post decompression phase, the “spinal decompression chiropractor” might employ additional chiropractic interventions or exercises to help stabilize and strengthen the spine, further reducing the likelihood of future discomfort.

Each phase of the spinal decompression therapy plays a significant role in alleviating back pain and promoting optimal spinal health. This non-invasive, pain-free treatment done by spinal decompression chiropractors can bring significant relief to individuals struggling with back pain, offering a more comfortable and pain-free life. In Troy, MI, Advanced Health Chiropractic stands ready to assist you with state-of-the-art spinal decompression therapy.

Benefits of Spinal Decompression Therapy

Spinal decompression therapy, performed by an expert spinal decompression chiropractor, comes with a variety of benefits. This non-invasive form of treatment strives to relieve back pain and improve your spine's overall function and health. Let's delve deeper into these benefits.

Relieves Pain

One of the most significant benefits of spinal decompression therapy is its ability to alleviate back pain. By creating space and lowering pressure in the spinal discs, the treatment reduces strain on the spinal nerves, directly addressing the root cause of many types of back pain. This approach offers effective, long-term “lower back pain relief,” making it a popular choice for many patients in Troy, MI, and beyond.

Enhances Spine Health

Spinal decompression therapy not only alleviates immediate discomfort, but it also contributes to the long-term health and well-being of your spine. The treatment promotes the flow of vital nutrients into the spinal discs, improving disc health, and reducing the likelihood of future disc degeneration. This enhanced spinal health can lead to more mobility, greater comfort, and an overall better quality of life.

Non-Invasive Treatment

Unlike surgical procedures, spinal decompression therapy offers a non-invasive solution to lower back pain. This aspect of the treatment makes it an attractive option for many patients, significantly reducing the recovery time and eliminating risks associated with surgery.

Cost-Effective

Compared to other forms of treatment, such as surgery or long-term medication use, spinal decompression therapy performed by experienced spinal decompression chiropractors can be a cost-effective solution for managing lower back pain.
